TINLEY BUSINESS MEN THANKED FOR RESPONSE

An expression of thanks and commendation to the business men is voiced for their generous response to the canvass which contribution was given in addition to that of their association. Many of our people had given through their churches, organizations and places of employment. The Tinley Park school contributed through this branch of the Red Cross the sum of $50.45, the Woman's Club, $11.00 and the Ladies Aid of the English Methodist church, $6.00 making a total contributed $202.84. This amount has been forwarded promptly to headquarters so that use of it may be made immediately.

We feel that this was a very generous response on the part of our community. If there are any others who desire to contribute, the undersigned will be pleased to receive such donations.

MRS. OMAR EBENHACK, Chairman.

Petitions Being Prepared for Town And Village Offices

This is the month when the political pots in villages and townships begin to boil. For the township elections to be held Tuesday, April 6, the first day for filing petitions with the town clerk is Friday, Feb. 5, and the last day for filing is March 2.

For the village elections, the first day for filing petitions for village offices with the village clerk is February 19 and the last day for filing is March 16. The village elections will be held Tuesday April 20.

This year there is a change in the law. All village officers will be elected, meaning a full ticket. The village presidents and the village clerks will be elected for a term of four years while the six village trustees will be elected for different terms. Three trustees will be elected for a term of six years so that three village trustees will be elected every two years, thus doing away with yearly elections.

All town officers will be elected with the exception of those officers whose terms do not expire this spring.

In Mokena it is understood four prospective candidates for village president are being groomed.

Mokena Garden Club News

The regular monthly meeting of the Mokena Garden Club was held Tuesday in the home of Mrs. E. Cooper. The topic under discussion was "Forcing" which proved very interesting and helpful. Several members brought cuttings of various bushes and trees to show that we need not be deprived of flowers in winter.

The club is planning many interesting events for the coming year one of which will be a new membership drive and which will close with a pot luck dinner.

Members be alert—a surprise is in store for you.

A special meeting of the club will be held Tuesday evening February 9 in the home of Mrs. Walter Yunker. All members are requested to attend.

Legion Auxiliary Asks For Clothing

The American Legion Auxiliary of Tinley Park, Post 615 will sponsor "Marines' Animal Circus" with extra features of "Chalk Talks" on Thursday, February 11 at Tinley Park school auditorium. A small admission charge is asked. Proceeds from this is entirely for the Flood Relief.

The Auxiliary also announces if anyone has donations of clothing for the flood territory, they may leave it at Vogt's department store where Mrs. Mamie Brandau will call for them.

Aged Green Garden Resident Dies

Mrs. Catherine Ullrich aged 86 years, passed away Thursday January 28, in the home of her son Adolph near Andros, Ill.

She is survived by her son and one daughter, Mrs. Henry Krapf. Funeral services were held from the Green Garden Methodist church last Sunday with the pastor, Rev. C. Shellhase, officiating.

Orland Legion Post Donates $50

The Orland Park Post of the American Legion has voted $50 for flood relief, this amount being turned over to the Red Cross.

New Lenox PTA Sponsors Giving Low Cost Serum

The Parent-Teacher group of the New Lenox Grade School is sponsoring the giving of low-cost inoculations for diphtheria, smallpox and typhoid fever to the school children and to pre-school children. This work is being done by Dr. Jeannette Holt at the school building on specified dates. Each inoculation is given at a cost of 25c.

The first, for diphtheria, was given Friday January 29. This will be followed by a second injection for the same disease on February 19.

Inoculations for typhoid and smallpox will be given at the school February 5th and March 26, respectively. Parents wishing to take advantage of these low-cost serums are urged to get in touch with either Mr. James Gurley, school principal, or Dr. Holt.

To Re-Decorate Frankfort Church

A representative of the decorating firm of O. J. Kover and Son from Ft. Wayne, Ind., was in town this week to work out a design and make a bid for decorating the St. Peter's church. Other decorators will also have an opportunity to bid on same. The Ladies Aid society will sponsor a play after Easter to raise money for the decorating which is to be completed by October for the church's 70th anniversary.

Country Districts Being Zoned In Will County

Will County is zoning all districts out side of the incorporated villages wherever such villages do not object to the county doing so. The county is zoning all territory located a mile and a half outside of the incorporated limits of villages for industrial, agricultural and residential purposes. All existing farms, industries and residences now in existence will not be affected but all new ones will be required to procure a permit from the county. All fences and buildings must be 66 feet away from the center of any road.

By zoning the various districts undesirable conditions will be eliminated. For instance if a person erects a nice home he can rest assured that no junk yard, factory or shack can be erected in its vicinity to detract from its beauty and value.

Practically all the territory around Frankfort has been zoned for agricultural purposes.

At Mokena the village board at their meeting Tuesday night passed a resolution granting the county officials to zone the local territory, with the provision, however, that the village board should have the right to suggest what the local territory is to be zoned for.

Mokena Has Highest Relief Tax

Tax bills in fifteen townships in Will County will be increased this year, due largely to the shift of poor relief responsibility from the county to the townships, according to County Clerk Henry Koerner.

In Joliet the 1936 tax rate jumped 31 cents, from $6.48 to $6.79 for each $100 of assessed valuation. Other increases ranging from a few cents to almost a dollar are noted throughout the county.

In all of the 16 townships, with the exception of Braidwood and Monee, the 30 cent minimum for poor relief was voted. The only reduction in tax rate occurs in Monee where rates will drop two cents under 1935.

The largest increase is recorded for Mokena where the rates jump 84 cents from $4.07 and $4.91, followed closely by Lockport, which has a 77 cent increase. The lowest increase of 4 cents, is reported for Elwood.

The county tax rate is down 1/2 cent to 73 cents.

Lincoln's mortal frame has vanished, but the spirit of "Honest Abe" still lives on. The noble ideals, courage and the spiritual greatness of Abraham Lincoln should be as a beacon light along our path of life.

In paying tribute next week, February 12th, to this great American, let us strengthen our resolve to be better men and women, more useful citizens. Unselfish service should be the guiding thought of every individual and organization.

FRANKFORT RAISES $637 FOR FLOOD RELIEF

Rev. Gerhold, the chairman of the committee to raise Red Cross funds for the flood sufferers in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys takes this opportunity of thanking all who so liberally contributed towards this fund.

In addition to a number of bundles of clothing which Mr. Balchowsky delivered to headquarters in Joliet on Wednesday the cash contributions amounted to $631.70. Special thanks are due to Mayor Sangmeister and Mrs. Andrews, secretary and treasurer and co-sponsors of the drive, and the men and women of the soliciting committees, who so willingly and unstintingly gave their time and efforts towards raising such a large sum. It is acts like these which will give our stricken neighbors the courage to take up the task of rebuilding their devastated homes with new courage and hope.

Mokena also did well in sending money and clothing and bedding to the Joliet Red Cross Chapter.

New Lenox PTA Will Observe Founders Day

The fortieth anniversary of the founding of the Parent-Teacher Association will be observed by the New Lenox Parent-Teacher group at its meeting February 12.

This association accomplishes many useful things toward the betterment of schools, homes and children. All parents are invited to come to this meeting and participate in the work the Association is striving to carry on. An interesting dramatic and musical program is being planned for that evening.

WM. WEBER FORMER NEW LENOX MAN DIES

William H. Weber, a former New Lenox resident, passed away Monday afternoon at Silver Cross hospital in Joliet at the age of 79 years.

Mr. Weber has been confined to his bed for the past several weeks.

Surviving him are his widow, Emma of Joliet; three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Wall of Lockport, Mrs. A. W. Walsh of New Lenox and Mrs. Lloyd Russell of Fremont, Ohio; four sons, William of Lockport, Arthur, Raymond and Joseph of Joliet; one sister, Mrs. Rose Thayer of Joliet and twelve grand children.

Services were held Thursday afternoon at two o'clock from the Harris-Schmaedeke chapel. Burial took place in the Hills of Rest cemetery, on the Trop road west of Joliet.

2 Outstanding Basketball Games At Tinley Sat.

Two outstanding basketball games will be featured Saturday evening February 6th in the Tinley Park school gym at which the weekly business men's awards will be drawn.

The T. Y. O. teams which so far have enjoyed a very successful season will go into action for this special occasion. The program will get under way at about 8:15 with the Tinley girls meeting the fast Harvey Merchants. To cap this battle, the old rivalry between the TYO boys and Orland boys will be renewed for the second time this year.

In two previous meetings the girls' teams have each won a game. The opening of the season saw the Merchants trouncing the TYO girls by the score of 25 to 10. But our girls came bouncing back as a much improved team to trim Harvey on their home floor 14 to 10. This meeting will be the rubber game and seeing as our girls continue to improve with each game, the local fans may look for one of the tightest games of the current year.

On the same evening that the Merchants were beating the Tinley girls, Orland managed to outlast a determined Tinley rally and won 23 to 26. Patrons of that night will remember the game as one of the hardest fought encounters the Tinley Boys have had. The TYO boys are seeking revenge for this defeat and are going into the fray with determination. Orland, you will remember won the TYO tournament last year so that a Tinley victory carries special significance.

If it's thrills and action you want don't miss these games, Saturday February 6.

Hearing On Closing Orland St., To Be Sat.

This coming Saturday morning February 6th at 10 a. m. a hearing will be held in the Interstate Commerce Commission headquarters in Chicago on the petition of the Wabash railroad to close the subway on Oak street in that village. The village board will object to the petition and will be represented at this hearing by their attorney, A. H. Krusemark.

Petitions have also been circulated and signed in protest of the closing move of the railroad and a real battle is expected.

New Lenox Flashes In Thrilling Games

The New Lenox Flashes, girls and boys teams, motored to Midlothian Thursday night to attempt another win from both Teams they beat last year. The girls held up fine until the half—the game ending in Midlothian's favor 20 to 12. These two teams will clash again when New Lenox will have advantage on their own home floor on Tuesday, Feb. 9.

However, the New Lenox boys took the Midlothian Five by a score of 14 to 11 in a fast game.

Immediately after the girls' loss to Midlothian, they motored to Mokena the same night and won from the Mokena girls by a score of 19 to 10. This being the Flashes fourth game and first win of the season.

At the meeting of the village board on Tuesday night it was voted on to have the Public Service install an electric street light at the Wolf road corner south of town and another street light near the Rafauff place.

Household Questions

Painting the top and bottom basement steps white is a good idea that may save many a fall.

A mixture of equal parts of salt and vinegar will quickly brighten copper or brass ware.

Grease your measuring cup before measuring syrup or molasses and the ingredients will not stick to the sides of the cup.

Do not put too much wax on floors. A little wax and plenty of polishing makes a better-looking floor.

To cook dried prunes wash them well, cover with four inches of cold water and let soak overnight. Simmer very slowly for one hour.

Do not use soft butter or lard in making pie crust. The shortening should be hard and cold.

Try mixing ginger cookies with cold coffee instead of water.

If you want a really gay and cheerful dressing table why not make the drapery of chintz which has a design of red, pink and yellow flowers on a rather bright blue ground. The frill of pleated yellow chintz about the top is headed by a narrower one of blue to match the ground of the printed chintz.

The Garden Murder Case

by S. S. VAN DINE

WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective, and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephram Garden's apartment" advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son Floyd and his puny cousin, Woode Swift, are addicted to horse-racing. Vance says that "Equanimity" is a horse running next day in the Rivermont handicap. Vance is convinced that the message was sent by Dr. Siefert, the Gardens' family physician. He arranges to have lunch next day at the Gardens' penthouse. Vance is greeted by Floyd Garden and meets Lowe Hammle, an elderly follower of horse racing. Floyd expressed concern over Swift's queer actions. Mrs. Garden, supposedly ill, came down stairs and places a $100 bet on a horse. Gathered around an elaborate loud speaker service, listening to the racing are Cecil Kroon, Madge Weatherby and Zalia Graem, who bet varying amounts on the race. There is tension under the surface gaiety. Zalia and Swift are not on speaking terms. Kroon leaves to keep an appointment before the race starts. Miss Beeton, a nurse, and Vance bet on "Azure Star." Swift recklessly bets $10,000 on "Equanimity" and goes to the roof garden to hear the results. Floyd follows Swift, remaining away several minutes. Zalia answers a phone call in the den. Soon after the announcement that "Azure Star" wins, the guests hear a shot.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Vance was the first on his feet. His face was grim as he moved rapidly toward the archway. I followed him, and just behind came Garden. As I turned into the hallway I saw the others in the drawing-room get up and move forward.

As we hurried down the hall Zalia Graem opened the den door.

"What was that?" she asked, her frightened eyes staring at us.

"We don't know yet," Vance told her.

In the bedroom door, at the lower end of the hall, stood the nurse, with a look of inquiring concern on her otherwise placid face.

"You'd better come along, Miss Beeton," Vance said, as he started up the stairs two at a time. "You may be needed."

Vance swung into the upper corridor and stopped momentarily at the door on the right, which led out upon the roof. This door was still propped open, and after a hasty preliminary survey through it, he stepped quickly out into the garden.

The sight that met our eyes was not wholly unexpected. There, in the low chair which he had pointed out to us earlier that afternoon, sat Woode Swift, slumped down, with his head thrown back at an unnatural angle against the rattan head-rest, and his legs straight out before him. He still wore the earphone. His eyes were open and staring; his lips were slightly parted; and his thick glasses were tilted forward on his nose.

In his right temple was a small ugly hole beneath which two or three drops of already coagulating blood had formed. His right arm hung limp over the side of the chair, and on the colored tiling just under his hand lay a small pearl-handled revolver.

Vance immediately approached the motionless figure, and the rest of us crowded about him. Zalia Graem, who had forced her way forward and was now standing beside Vance, swayed suddenly and caught at his arm. Her face had gone pale, and her eyes appeared glazed. Vance turned quickly and, putting his arm about her, half led and half carried her to a large wicker divan nearby. He made a beckoning motion of his head to Miss Beeton.

"Look after her for a moment," he requested. "And keep her head down." Then he returned to Swift. "Every one please keep back," he ordered. "No one is to touch him."

He took out his monocle and adjusted it carefully. Then he leaned over the crumpled figure in the chair. He cautiously scrutinized the wound, the top of the head, and the tilted glasses. When this examination was over he knelt down on the tiling and seemed to be searching for something. Apparently he did not find what he sought, for he stood up with a discouraged frown and faced the others.

"Dead," he announced, in an unwontedly sombre tone. "I'm taking charge of things temporarily."

Zalia Graem had risen from the divan, and the nurse was supporting her with a show of tenderness.

"Please, Miss Beeton," he said, "take the young lady downstairs immediately." Then he added, "I'm sure she'll be all right in a few minutes."

The nurse nodded, put her arm firmly about Miss Graem, and led her into the passageway.

Vance waited until the two young women were gone; then he turned to the others. "You will all be so good as to go downstairs and remain there until further orders."

"But what are you going to do, Mr. Vance?" asked Mrs. Garden in a frightened tone. "We must keep this thing as quiet as possible. . . . My poor Woody!"

"I'm afraid, madam, we shall not be able to keep it quiet at all," Vance spoke with earnest significance. "My first duty will be to telephone the district attorney and the homicide bureau."

Mrs. Garden gasped. "The district attorney? The Homicide bureau?" she repeated distractedly. "Oh, no! . . . Why must you do that? Surely, any one can see that the poor boy took his own life."

Vance shook his head slowly. "I regret, madam," he said, "that this is not a case of suicide. . . . It's murder!"

Following Vance's unexpected announcement there was a sudden silence. Everyone moved reluctantly toward the door to the passageway. Only Garden remained behind. "Is there a telephone up here?" Vance asked.

"Yes, certainly," replied Garden. "There's one in the study."

Garden brushed past us with nervous energy, as if glad of the opportunity for action. He threw open the door at the end of the passageway and stood aside for us to enter the study.

"Over there," he said, pointing to the desk at the far end of the room, on which stood a hand telephone. "That's an open line. No connection with the one we use for the ponies, though it's an extension of the phone in the den." He stepped swiftly behind the desk and threw a black key on the switch box that was attached to the side of the desk. "By leaving the key in this position, you are disconnected from the extension downstairs, so that you have complete privacy."

"Oh, quite," Vance nodded with a faint smile. "I use the same system in my own apartment. Thanks awfully for your thoughtfulness. . . . And now please join the others downstairs and try to keep things balanced for a little while—there's a good fellow."

Garden took his dismissal with good grace and went toward the door.

"Oh, by the way, Garden," Vance called after him, "I'll want a little chat with you in private, before long."

Garden turned, a troubled look on his face.

"I suppose you'll be wanting me to rattle all the family skeletons for you? But that's all right. When you're ready for me you've only to press that buzzer on the bookshelves there, just behind the desk." He indicated a white push-button set flush in the center of a small square japanned box on the upright between two sections of the bookshelves. "That's part of the intercommunicating system between this room and the den. I'll see that the den door is left open, so that I can hear the buzz wherever I am."

"Rather Interesting, This Disarray," He Observed.

Vance nodded curtly, and Garden, after a momentary hesitation, turned and went from the room.

As soon as Garden could be heard making his way down the stairs, Vance closed the door and went immediately to the telephone. A moment later he was speaking to Markham.

"The galloping horses, old dear," he said. "The Trojans are riding roughshod. Equanimity was needed, but came in too far behind. Result, a murder. Young Swift is dead. And it was as clever a performance as I've yet seen. . . . No. Markham," his voice suddenly became grave—"I'm not spoofing. I think you'd better come immediately. And notify Sergeant Heath, if you can reach him, and the medical examiner."

He replaced the receiver slowly. "This is a subtle crime, Van," he meditated. "Too subtle for my peace of mind. I don't like it—I don't at all like it. And I don't like this intrusion of horse-racing. Sheer expediency. . . ."

He went thoughtfully to the north window and looked out on the garden. The rattan chair with its gruesome occupant could not be seen from the study, as it was far to the left of the window, near the west balustrade.

"I wonder. . . ."

He turned from the window abruptly and came back to the desk. "A few words with the colorless Garden are indicated, before the minions of the law arrive."

He placed his finger on the white button in the buzzer box and depressed it for a second. Then he went to the door and opened it.

Several moments went by, but Garden did not appear, and Vance again pressed the button. After a full minute or two had passed without any response to his summons, Vance started down the passageway to the stairs, beckoning me to follow.

As he came to the vault door on the right, he halted abruptly. He scrutinized the heavy calamine door for a moment or two. At first glance it seemed to be closed tightly, but as I looked at it more closely, I noticed that it was open a fraction of an inch, as if the spring catch, which locked it automatically, had failed to snap when the door had last been shut. Vance pushed on the door gently with the tips of his fingers, and it swung inward slowly and ponderously.

"Deuced queer," he commented. "A vault for preserving valuable documents—and the door unlocked. I wonder. . . ."

CHAPTER IV

The lights from the halls shone into the dark recess of the vault, and as Vance pushed the door further inward a white cord hanging from a ceiling light became visible. To the end of this cord was attached a miniature brass pestle which acted as a weight. Vance stepped immediately inside and jerked the cord, and the vault was flooded with light. "Vault" hardly describes this small storeroom, except that the walls were unusually thick, and it had obviously been constructed to serve as a burglar proof repository. The room was about five by seven feet, and the ceiling was as high as that of the hallway. The walls were lined with deep shelves from floor to ceiling, and these were piled with all manner of papers, documents, pamphlets, filing cases, and racks of test-tubes and vials labeled with mysterious symbols. Three of the shelves were devoted to a series of sturdy steel cash and security boxes. The floor was overlaid with small squares of black and white ceramic tile.

Although there was ample room for us both inside the vault, I remained in the hallway, watching Vance as he looked about him.

Vance leaned over and picked up a batch of scattered typewritten papers which had evidently been brushed down from one of the shelves directly opposite the door. He glanced at them for a moment and carefully replaced them in the empty space on the shelf.

"Rather interesting," this disarray," he observed.

"The professor was obviously not the last person in here, or he would certainly not have left his papers on the floor. . . . He wheeled about. 'My word!' he exclaimed in a low tone. 'These fallen papers and that unlatched door. . . . It could be, don't y' know.' There was a suppressed excitement in his manner. 'I say, Van, don't come in here; and, above all, don't touch this door-knob.'"

He knelt down on the tiled floor and began a close inspection of the small squares, as if he were counting them. His action reminded me of the way he had inspected the tiling on the roof near the chair in which we had found young Swift. It occurred to me that he was seeking here what he had failed to find in the garden.

"It should be here," he murmured. "It would explain many things—it would form the first vague outline of a workable pattern. . . ."

After searching about for a minute or two, he stopped abruptly and leaned forward eagerly. Then he took a small piece of paper from his pocket and adroitly flicked something onto it from the floor. Folding the paper carefully, he tucked it away in his waistcoat pocket. Although I was only a few feet from him and was looking directly at him, I could not see what it was that he had found.

"I think that will be all for the moment," he said, rising and pulling the cord to extinguish the light. Coming out into the hallway, he closed the vault door by carefully grasping the shank of the knob. Then he moved swiftly down the passageway, stepped through the door to the garden, and went directly to the dead man. Though his back was turned to me as he bent over the figure, I could see that he took the folded paper from his waistcoat pocket and opened it. He glanced repeatedly from the paper in his hand to the limp figure in the chair. At length he nodded his head emphatically, and rejoined me in the hallway. We descended the stairs to the apartment below.

Just as we reached the lower hall, the front door opened and Cecil Kroon entered. He seemed surprised to find us in the hall, and asked somewhat vaguely, as he threw his hat on a bench:

"Anything the matter?"

Vance studied him sharply and made no answer; and Kroon went on:

"I suppose the big race is over, damn it! Who won it—Equanimity?"

Vance shook his head slowly, his eyes fixed on the other.

"Azure Star won the race. I believe Equanimity came in fifth or sixth."

"And did Woody go in on him up to the hilt, as he threatened?"

Vance nodded. "I'm afraid he did."

"Good Gad!" Kroon caught his breath. "That's a blow for the chap. How's he taking it?" He looked away from Vance as if he would rather not hear the answer.

"He's not taking it," Vance returned quietly. "He's dead."

Lesson for February 7

JESUS THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

LESSON TEXT—John 8:12, 31, 32; 9:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Passed By.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Passed By.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Is the Light of the World.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Walking in the Light With Jesus.

"The Light of the World Is Jesus!" Who does not remember with what delight we as children sang "Come to the light, 'tis shining for thee. . . . The Light of the world is Jesus." How precious was the truth that thus flooded our souls. Jesus was the light, and just as the sunlight shed its glory on an awakening world at dawn, so he shed abroad the light of God in the hearts of men. The writer of these lessons pens these words with the prayer that as this portion of God's Holy Word is studied and taught, the light may break forth on many a soul caught in the bewilderment of this dark world.

Our study centers around three simple words fraught with beauty and rich in meaning.

I. Light (John 8:12).

The text says, "Then spake Jesus." When? Just after he had silenced the hypocritical accusers of a woman taken in sin, and had spoken the word of peace to her troubled soul. She was to "go and sin no more" because she had met him who is the "Light of the World." They that follow him "shall not walk in darkness"; they are the children of light, they have the very light of life.

II. Freedom (vv. 31, 32).

Free! Four letters, but what depth of meaning! Chains have fallen off, prison doors are open. The one who was bound is free.

But here we are concerned with an even more important liberty, the freedom of the soul. Many there are who boast of their independence but who are naught but slaves. Jesus said, "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin" (John 8:34), not its master.

How shall they be freed? Note three things in these verses. (1) A condition, "If ye continue in my word." This means not only a profession of faith but a daily appropriation and realization of his truth in life. (2) A promise, "Ye shall know the truth." The philosophies of men profess to be a seeking after truth but how few there are who look to the one place where it can be found—in Jesus Christ. (3) A result, "the truth shall make you free." Truth always sets free. Men are enslaved because, as in some foreign lands, they have not had the opportunity to learn the truth (we have failed to send it) or because they have rejected it.

III. Vision (John 9:1-11).

This is one of the most instructive passages in Scripture. A man born blind is seen by Jesus. His disciples note his intent and begin to theorize on a theological question. They had learned so little of the compassionate spirit of Jesus that they saw in this blighted life only an illustration of a theological theory. May God help us that we may never be so blind.

Jesus goes at once to work. He was in the world to do the works of God. He and the Father always work. Let us follow his blessed example. "The King's business requires haste." Let us work "while it is day, the night cometh when no man can work."

By a loving and gracious act, Jesus stirs in the heart of the man that faith which causes him to go, to wash, and, glory to God, he sees!

Such a personal experience of the divine power of the Son of God leaves no doubt in the man's mind that the one who caused him to see "is a prophet." All of a man's doubts concerning the deity of Jesus Christ disappear when he becomes his Saviour.

Read the remainder of the chapter and note how this man's faith is victorious in the face of trials, persecution, and even of excommunication; for outside the temple he met Jesus and takes him as his Lord. As Dr. Scroggie puts it, "His excommunication was a promotion. He went from the synagogue to the Saviour."

How Brazil Got Name

Long before the "official" discovery of the new world, as far back as the Thirteenth century the existence of Brazil was already known to traffickers and merchants from a legend current among them. The report was that far away was a mysterious country covered by immense forests where a tinctorial tree grew in abundance. The dye was of a fiery hue, much like a brasa (live ember). Hence the name of brasil, given first to the wood and afterwards to the country where it grew.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt right into the delicate tissues, making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—night and morning. Murine may be depended on to relieve eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing 7 active ingredients of known value in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

At Grandma's House

Best feature of grandma's "breakfast room"—where she baked the griddle cakes—was that it was the only really warm place in the house on a winter morning.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

ARE YOU ONLY A THREE-QUARTER WIFE?

THERE are certain things a woman has to put up with and be a good sport.

Men, because they are men, can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is all love and kindness three weeks in a month and a hell cat the rest of the time.

No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Sentimental Arithmetic

Norman had come upon Elsie dozing in a deck chair on the sands, and when she woke up she accused him of stealing a kiss. "Well," said Norman, "I admit the temptation was too strong to be resisted. Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.
If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adierika. Adierika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.
Adierika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.
Adierika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adierika one-half hour before bedtime or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. At all Leading Druggists.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

This is in reply to a letter signed "A Citizen" and appearing in your last week's issue. I have been looking for the definition of "Hick" in my Webster's dictionary, copyrighted 1920 and probably therefore out of date as I could not find such a word in it. I have often heard this expression used in larger towns or cities where it was used by some people, either thru their lack of a common school education or thoughtlessness, to designate a farmer from the country. You have also heard the expression "He comes from a hick town", which may be construed as a town in which citizens are more or less retired farmers. The word itself probably means an uncouth or seedy person. I may be all wrong about this definition as I can only speak of my impression of what the meaning of the word implied as used by such people while they were talking to me. The writer states in his letter that people who live in other towns make fun about us and say we are a bunch of hicks who don't have spirit and pride.

Now I do not think that it was the writer's intention to cast any reflections on our ancestors or on us although the average class of people living and owning property in Mokena were at one time farmers or descendants of farmers, with some exceptions of course. We can feel proud of that fact as thousands of other communities like ours represent part of the real backbone of the United States, whereas large cities contain many of shallow character. By other towns the writer surely cannot mean any of the surrounding towns like Frankfort, Orland Park, New Lenox, Tinley Park or any other towns in the State of Illinois that have not more than 500 or 1000 inhabitants and who on account their small amount of inhabitants have so far been unable to establish bowling alleys, free gymnasiums, libraries, swimming pools and what not for the amusement of all folks concerned except it was taken up by private enterprise. There may be one or two exceptions but that does not comprise the over large majority of towns in that class. Large towns have greater number of taxpayers, small towns like ours, which has a population of 460 people including the children, have only a small amount of taxpayers. We should, therefore, not be greatly concerned about other people calling us hicks, as that is not the essence of the matter in question.

Mr. Citizen of last week's letter should therefore not feel greatly hurt by disparaging remarks made by certain people of other communities as in all probability they themselves were of no great asset in their own communities in furthering projects for the benefit of such communities. Let us forget what other people think or speak and concern ourselves with the more important sentence of last week's letter, namely: Why don't we give the young folks some place where they can have good clean sport? The writer's suggestion was to work out an idea or plan such as a public bowling alley. I have spent quite a few hours on a public bowling alley and did belong to a bowling club comprised of office clerks and have found it to be a clean and enjoyable sport. Such bowling alleys can also become a general nuisance if not properly supervised. But in the case of Mokena or other small towns of the same size, it would be better to handle such an enterprise thru private ownership or by a group of business men and would not benefit all concerned. It would be more practical to have a small neighborhood playground somewhere in the village limits and accessible to all and owned and controlled by the village thru its Village Board and should contain in the area of five acres of land for a baseball park, which can be used for a football field as well, with enough extension for other field sports. A wading pool which can be used as a skating pond in the winter, the balance of the grounds to be divided into a girls or young women gym, boys and young men gym, out door gym and a small children's area with the usual outdoor gym apparatus. Also a tennis court would not be out of place or any other amusements which are practical. City and village officials have adequate authority to proceed with the acquisition and development of play areas. A few lots well located and properly equipped will prove a constant attraction to young people and benefit the town. This may sound more like a pipe dream to most of us living in small towns, but it can be gone into by the Board if they should see fit to investigate such a proposition.

TYO BASKETBALL

Two of the best basketball games of the season were played last Thursday evening when Lemont came to town to be defeated by our two teams. They were both well played games and the fans can see a very big improvement in both sets of players.

The girls know how to pass with speed and when Maggie, our center gets her hands on the ball, try and get it.

We were sorry to see Fretag get a knee injury which may keep her out for a while.

When Fern starts going down with the ball, she really has speed. And Moss with her long shots is really getting good and we can depend on Cassie to do her bit in getting those baskets. And the rest are all getting there also, many thanks to Artie, our coach.

The boys have two full teams and are they going places. Talk about our center, Robert Funk, he really played basketball last week like we always knew he could.

Ryan with his tricky plays, and Lewman, Klepper and Paul Nielsen shooting baskets, we are proud of our regulars.

The second team are also right up there. Come out and support these young folks, they need it.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 31.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing." (Zephaniah 3: 17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee; my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land where no water is; To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary. Because thy loving kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee" (Psalms 63: 1-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "People go into ecstasies over the sense of a corporeal Jehovah, though with scarcely a spark of love in their hearts; yet God is Love, and without Love, God, immortality cannot appear. . . . Mortals believe in a finite personal God; while God is infinite Love, which must be unlimited" (p. 312).

Around the Town New Lenox

Hats off—everybody—here we go again, and believe it or not, but we didn't have to use that wheelbarrow and shovel we took to the party last Wednesday night to help that certain party (who got cold feet and didn't show up) pick up dirt. Nevertheless, E. N. scrapped up plenty.

First of all, D. R. sure got bawled out for being an hour and a half late on his date but 'Fluffy' finally forgave him and the party went on. The evening proved a success for F. R., he had a merry old time and was the last one out of the place.

M. M. seemed a wee bit upset most of the night. What possibly could have been wrong? Tired—or the boy friend? B. W. appeared to be enjoying her heavy date with B. L. and Bernie sure mixed with the crowd in a big way. Yimmie slept the early part of the evening and later there was no stopping him from having a good time. V. K. proved to be E. N.'s good time. W. S. and E. N. held the crowd spell bound with a new dance. I. M. appeared to be rather quiet outside of a couple songs. Bet he misses his gal.

Ally enjoyed himself just laughing at the others but once he broke down and danced for the crowd.

An evening is never over without Pie ala mode at Jack's, according to A. W. and L. A. so they and Diamond Lil, Yimmie, Fluffy, Fluz, D. R., V. A. and D. W. sort of took over Jack's Place for an hour after the party. Diamond must have forgotten she was with Yim and put all interest in some fellow sitting next to her.

Imagine A. W. surprise while sitting on the stone wall back of the post office to find a cop standing behind her. And did she rin or did she run?

Just what would W. S. do without that spot light on his car? The gang sure had a rippin' good time Tuesday night out coasting—everybody was stiff the next day with the exception of Fluffy and she felt fine.

T. R. has got himself a pair of Skies now and instead of standing on them he sits most of the time. Some fun, eh wot?

J. M. has to have his glass of milk when he eats hot-dogs.

Seems that when P. S. goes out for pleasure he leaves his wife at home.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

GOLF stories are always timely and when they combine the humor of the Scotch golf-links they are generally good.

Here's one that I heard the other day and in relaying it to you I can only hope that it isn't an old timer with you.

A very stingy man come to play and he wouldn't pay the regular Caddy fee, but picked up a little bit of a kid that had hung around trying to get to Caddy but never had. As he was starting to drive off a regular Caddy come up and said, "Carry your Clubs, Mister?" "No, can't you see I have a Caddy?" said the close Party.

The real Caddy looked at this little runt of a kid and tipped his hat to the man and asked him again, "Carry your Caddy, Sir?"

Everyday Cooking Miracles

BY VIRGINIA FRANCIS

Director Hotpoint Electric Cookery Institute

Do you have that kind of husband who calls you Tuesday noon, knowing very well that that's the day your bridge club meets, and announces he's bringing a guest home to dinner? And do little things like that sometimes annoy you? Or are you one of those miracle hostesses who can spend the of your new automatic electric range.

Such a meal as stuffed round steak, sweet potatoes, onions and steamed snowballs, though not as "ultra" as filet mignon and lobster thermidor, will do you proud by your husband's business associate or college pal.

This delicious dinner was cooked entirely in the Thrift Cooker of the modern electric range.

afternoon tense with excitement at the bridge party, come home with the prize and then go calmly about getting dinner for the guests?

It's easy to be the calm, well-poised hostess when you have dinner all prepared and ready to "dish up" upon returning home. That, in fact, is the basic rule for easy entertainment because it makes your guests feel welcome and makes you enjoy their visit. The hostess who must stay out in the kitchen preparing a last minute meal, while her husband takes care of the guests in the living room, misses most of the fun and appears warm and fussed at the company dinner table.

A Piping-Hot Dinner

The miracle hostess is one who enjoys all the afternoon's fun, and the evening's as well, and then serves a piping hot, well-cooked dinner calmly and with the self-assurance which is characteristic of the successful homemaker. You will find this kind of "hostessing" economical too; especially when the meal, Jack-in-the-box-like, springs from the thrift cooker

Thrift Cooker Dinner

To prepare such a meal: Spread a round steak (1/2 inch thick) with a well-seasoned bread dressing, roll it up and secure with a skewer. Preheat the roomy thrift cooker kettle on High heat and brown the steak on all sides. Place steak on rack in cooker, add 1 1/2 cups water and surround meat with pared sweet potatoes (cut in lengthwise pieces) and whole onions. Pour the pudding batter into individual molds and arrange them on top of the vegetables. Fancy, cooking onions with the dessert! But that's just one of those amazing things about the thrift cooker. Each food takes its share of the heat units and minds its own business, even to hoarding its own individual flavor.

After the meal is placed in the cooker, it cooks on High heat until steam comes from vent; then on Low for about 1 hour.

And strange but true—it's the economical dishes which choose the economy Thrift Cooker unit, for in this unit these dishes, Cinderella-like, are transformed into delectable company foods.

Mrs. Myrtle Stout attended the card club meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Bruns in New Lenox on Sunday evening.

Several friends from here attended the funeral services held for Mr. Cleo Wilmington in Lockport, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Wilmington's mother will be remembered as the former Maude Rouse and lived in Marley at one time.

John Madsen of Joliet spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lauffer.

George Pink spent last week end at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Corp in Plainfield.

The Marley Sunday Evening Club has chosen the following officers for their new quarter: President, Mr. Ralph Tilsy; Vice-President, Miss Marian Handorf; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Helen Tilsy.

A group of friends and relatives from Marley and Mokena attended the shower for Miss Bertha Boeman of Kempton who is become the bride of Donald Haley.

Too Much Legislation

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

At the opening sessions of our present Congress, more than 2,000 bills were submitted in the fond hope that they would be enacted into law.

The total continues to rise.

What do these measures propose? Many things—from reckless experiments with our Constitution, to minor relief bills which would dip deeply into public funds for the benefit of constituents pressing a wide variety of demands.

But is all that legislation and wordage either good or necessary? Obviously not. What the average American wants of Congress can be expressed in far fewer words and measures. It includes:

Continued protection in the rights guaranteed him under the Constitution—among them freedom of religion, of speech and of the press.

Opportunity to conduct his own affairs and live his own life, unharmed by edicts from appointed bureau chiefs or coercion by minority groups.

Relief from needless extravagance in government, which must ultimately be paid out of increased taxes on both his present and his future earnings.

A sincere respect for the Constitution of the United States, under which this nation has surpassed all others in the freedom and the well-being of its people.

These desires are comparatively few. They impose no great strain on Congress. And if met they will do much not only to retain our successful form of government, but to smooth and broaden the path toward recovery which all America seeks to tread.

Too much legislation can block rather than widen that path.

America Wasteful Despite Blessings Says Pastor

Despite the devastation of the Ohio and Mississippi river floods, America has much to be thankful for in the matter of its natural blessings, Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph. D., declared Sunday in his broadcast on the coast-to-coast Lutheran hour net work.

Referring to the greater flood disasters of other countries, notably China, Dr. Maier appealed for national prayer and thanksgiving to God. "In 1911, when the Yang-tse Kiang flooded to a width of 35 miles 100,000 lives were destroyed," Dr. Maier added, "and just 50 years ago in 1887, when the Hoang-ho spread over its banks more than a million lost their lives."

Pointing out that in 250 years of American history the total recorded loss of lives in the major floods of the United States was 10,533. Dr. Maier said "For every American life taken by floods and their consequences, 100 Chinese lives have been destroyed. We have been blessed as no other nation not only in the abundance of our national wealth and natural power, but also in the protection with which divine providence has guarded our nation and its home."

"However, the willful waste of these resources may produce alarming disaster. One of the factors that helps to swell the rushing floods is the ruthless deluding of the forests. In a single Texas oil field, enough gas is wasted every day to supply the entire household needs of the nation. Tons of California oranges have been permitted to rot on orchard floors; hundreds of thousands of apples have been thrown into the Columbia river; carloads of Alaska salmon dumped into the Pacific; extended acreages of farm products ploughed under. This waste must be stopped, for no nation is wealthy enough to destroy its own blessings."

7 per cent Boost Made In Payment Rate on Farm Plan

Good news for Will County farmers who cooperated in the 1936 agricultural conservation program is contained in an announcement that rates on class 1, or diversion, payments have been increased by 7 per cent.

Notice of the increase in payment rate has been received by Farm Advisor, L. W. Brahm from the extension service, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

This means that a producer who would have received $100 for diversion under the old rates will receive $107 for having participated in the 1936 program, Mr. Brahm explained.

Expenses for administering the program in counties in Illinois and other states in the north central region, are paid by co-operating farmers, each farmer's pro-rata share being deducted from any payments to be received. This 7 per cent increase in the class 1 payment rate will about equal county administrative expenses.

However, because of differences in administrative costs in various counties, payments to farmers will range from 103 per cent in counties where administrative costs are relatively low to 97 per cent in counties where the maximum deductions permitted for administrative expenses are made.

There have been 770 checks received in Will County so far amounting to $104,927.29.

Payments now being made in Will county and other counties in Illinois constitute 90 per cent of the total payment earned by following soil-conserving and soil building practices under the 1936 program. The final installment payment will be made as soon as administrative expenses are determined and prorated, Mr. Brahm explained.

History in the MAKING

That is what is covered in our Weekly News Review feature each week. It is an interpretation of the events of each week that are making the history of the nation and the world. It is prepared by Edward W. Pickard, one of the highly trained newspaper observers of the nation, and syndicated to a limited number of newspapers in the different states. It is the best feature of this character that goes to American readers from any source. You can make it the foundation of your discussion of world events with friends.

MOKENA

IN MEMORIAM

HURLEY CARRIE—In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister who passed away four years ago, February 4, 1933.
What would we give
Her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that used to be,
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife
And clasp each other's hand once more
In Heaven, That Happy Life.

PTA NOTES

A very enjoyable evening was spent in the school auditorium last Tuesday evening. This being "Dad's" night a special program was planned. A collection was taken to aid the Red Cross in their work in the flood areas.

After the regular PTA business meeting Mrs. Schevlin, the program chairman introduced the following accordion selections by Melvin Nordwell and Gordon Benson.

The introduction of Prof. Drewcastle of Joliet who gave a most interesting talk on "Choosing a Youth's Vocation." His talk was enjoyed immensely being a subject in which all parents are greatly interested.

Concluding the entertainment for the evening the Mokena Band under the direction of Mr. Robert Wight, gave a fine demonstration of the advancement they have made in such a short time of study.

After the program refreshments were served.

FINEST AND SAFEST OF BRAKING SYSTEMS!

ON THE NEW FORD V-8

YOU'LL agree when you try the new Ford brakes, that you never felt "softer" or easier Ford brake pedal action, nor ever had any car stop smoother or quicker.

And you get the safety of strong steel cables from the pedal to each wheel. They always work. Weather can't affect them and even damage to one wheel wouldn't affect the other 3 brakes.

Also... Ford brakes give extra-long brake-lining life! Big 12-inch drums give more braking surface for car weight than any other car in America.

All in all, you'll find these brakes a good example of a great Ford principle. It's the principle that the usual way isn't always the best way in building a car... but that the best at the price is what makes value! YOUR FORD DEALER

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Lincoln as the Loneliest Man

"I AM the loneliest man in America." These words dropped from the lips of Abraham Lincoln one evening in 1863, that period which was so dark and unpromising for the cause of the Union.

In March, 1863, writes W. H. Smith in the Washington Post, I heard the incident related to a small group of distinguished men by Bishop Ames of the Methodist church. I do not know if it has ever appeared in print, but if it has, it is worth retelling. The narration took place in the National Hotel, in Washington, in a suite of rooms then occupied by John Evans, territorial governor of Colorado, and father of Evanston, Chicago's beautiful suburb. My presence is accounted for by the fact that Governor Evans was a relative and I had called to pay my respects.

In the group were two or three Methodist bishops, a member of the senate and two of the house. I am sure no one who heard it related ever forgot it, or the impressive manner of the bishop. President Lincoln and the bishop were warm personal friends, and the President had employed the bishop on some delicate mission connected with the war. The bishop said that one evening in June, 1863, he went to the White House to call on the President. The President was in a very despondent mood. Hooker had just suffered his defeat at Chancellorsville. The conversation lasted until a late hour of the night.

The President reviewed the situation at length. The war had been going on for two years, and the North had made little material progress. The bishop asked if he despaired of a final victory. His response was made with great earnestness:

"No. I dare not despair when I know there is a God who controls

"I Dare Not Despair When I Know There Is a God."

the affairs of nations as He does those of individuals, but the thought of the thousands who must yet be slain is appalling."

It was then he uttered the words with which this article begins. He said: "I am the loneliest man in America. There is no one to whom I can go and unload my troubles, assured of sympathy and help."

He spoke of the quibbling, complaining and fault finding in congress, and the harsh and unjust criticisms heaped upon him. He spoke with extreme heat of what he

LINCOLN

Wise with the wisdom of ages,

Grim as the prophets and sages,
Keen as a damask blade;

Firm as a granite-ribbed mountain,
Tender as woman's song,

Yet was he oaken-strong.

termed "that meddlesome body," the committee on the conduct of war.

The President rapidly reviewed Grant's record since he joined the army. He was at Cairo with a small force. He urgently asked permission to move, saying he would win a victory. The consent was long delayed, but it came at last. Within two or three hours his men were on the steamers, and the brilliant victory of Belmont followed.

"Grant," He Said, "Fights, and That Is What I Want."

It was not a great victory, for the forces engaged were not large, but it was a beginning and showed the mettle of Grant.

Back to Cairo, with a larger force he again and again urged for permission to move, and when the permission came he rushed his men to the steamers, and three days later he captured Fort Henry. Not delaying an hour he pushed his small force across the country to Fort Donelson. He was not dismayed by the fact that the force in the fort was larger than his own, but immediately locked the doors on that force. When the rest of his men reached him, by a series of brilliant assaults, he captured, not alone the fort, but an army almost equal in number to his own.

At Shiloh, unlike any other general, he remained to fight after his disaster on the first day, he made no effort to get the remains of his army across the river, but at daylight the next morning became the attacking party, winning a victory. He was now at Vicksburg, and complaints of his delay were many. Only that day two senators had urged Lincoln to displace Grant, but he would not do it. "Grant," he said, "fights, and that is what I want." He said Grant had promised him he would capture Vicksburg by the fourth of July, and he intended to give him the opportunity.

The President, with deep earnestness, then declared: "When he captures Vicksburg, I will find some way to boost him over the heads of all others, and give him command of all the armies. With Grant in command, by Jinks!" (his favorite expletive) "the armies will move and move to some purpose. He fights."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The arrival of the first robin is only a sign of the coming of spring. It does not bring spring weather. Nevertheless, we Americans watch for signs all our lives and lately there have been several of them in national affairs that are worthy of notice.

There never has been a time in our country's history, as far as I have been able to discover, when the tension surrounding labor conditions has been as dangerous as it is right now. I do not believe anyone can forecast what the results are going to be; what all of these strikes and factional fights in organized labor mean and I am convinced that they represent something much deeper than just dissatisfaction with wages or growing pains of expanding business. In other words, there are many students of national affairs who are attempting to analyze current labor conditions as signs of new times.

Most observers with whom I have discussed the present labor problems, are hopeful that these troubles mean only continued increases in the demand for labor. That is, they want to accept these signs as indicative of a returning and sound prosperity in commerce and industry. Yet, none of them is quite sure. There are too many "ifs" and too many uncertainties for anyone to attempt a complete diagnosis of the circumstances.

Some weeks ago I ventured the opinion in these columns that the rift in organized labor between William Green as head of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis as sponsor of the industrial union idea, likely would result in serious trouble for the labor unions themselves. I was unable to report then that which I can write at this time, namely, that the schism in organized labor appears certain to set back the cause of organized labor many years. Indeed, it seems that the split, tangled as it is with partisan politics, may prove to be the uncharted rock in union labor's course and its ship may founder on it.

But the situation is fraught with graver possibilities, I am sure.

Grave Possibilities

There are elements and influences at work in the labor situation today that easily could lead to riots and bloodshed. From riots and bloodshed it is only a step to revolution of a political sort.

None here knows exactly what the administration's labor policies are beyond the exaggerated promises made during the last Presidential campaign. Of course, President Roosevelt and the bulk of his New Deal spokesmen are exceedingly friendly, overfriendly some believe, to organized labor. The New Dealers had organized labor with them in the last campaign. Now, however, it is made to appear that the support of labor in the campaign is proving more or less embarrassing to the administration which has just started on its second four-year term.

Some of the critics of the administration are outspoken in their statements that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to dodge, trying to avoid, getting mixed up too deeply in labor's problems. Some of his subordinates have been active but the President has stayed out of the picture just as far as he could and as long as he could.

I am inclined to believe that these assertions that Mr. Roosevelt is afraid to take leadership too frequently in labor's problems are unfair to the President. They amount to a statement that he lacks courage—which is not true. On the contrary, there are many who believe with me that Mr. Roosevelt senses developments yet to arise in the labor situation and he is, therefore, being cautious as to its steps thus early in what threatens to be a national labor crisis.

On the other hand, it is difficult to explain why the national labor relations board has been so nearly quiescent through such strikes as the plate glass and portions of the automobile workers.

If there ever was a situation made to order for use of the agency set up under the so-called Wagner law, that situation was to be found in the two strikes just mentioned. The board did so little in those circumstances that its existence can be said to have been forgotten. It amounted to a dead letter insofar as the law itself is concerned. In some quarters one can hear discussion to the effect that sponsors of the national labor relations act and board were unwilling to have that agency and the law receive a real test at this time. I have been unable to confirm this thought at all but frankly the circumstances that one sees indicate there is some truth in the rumor that too much of a burden should not be unloaded on the board for its first real test.

Business interests never have believed the law to be constitutional. The New Dealers, however, have contended vociferously that it is valid and yet we have the picture of a New Deal agency failing to perform the very functions for which it was created.

I mentioned earlier some of the signs and portents that are visible in the labor situation. One of the most important of these is the significance of the "sit down" type of strike. I find many informed authorities who refer to the "sit down" strike as a key point in present labor problems.

It is something new in this country. It is a program of striking in which labor is entirely passive but by which it usurps the rights of ownership. The workers simply stay in the plants, offering no trouble and for the most part avoiding destructive tactics. But it is the fact that they remain in the plants, the property of their employers, that is causing considerable worry in government circles.

The reason why this phase of strike tactics is creating concern lies in the fact that it amounts to the seizure of private property by individuals who have no right or warrant in law. It would be the same thing as far as legal rights are concerned if a group of strikers went to your home or mine and announced they expected to stay there. There is no difference in the two situations. While the effect on you or me would be less important to the country as a whole, it remains as a fact that our rights would be violated in exactly the same manner as rights of corporations were violated, say, in the General Motors strike. After all, you and I are merely units of the great mass of people that make up the United States of America. Now, it takes no great stretch of the imagination to recognize that if union labor establishes its ability to occupy the property of others and fixes that as a precedent, then where are the rights of any person who owns property. It matters not whether it is a small cottage, a farm home or a great industrial plant—the right to own property, guaranteed to us by the Constitution of the United States, is virtually nullified.

One of the rights of American citizenship is a right to own property. It is a principle that has grown to be sacred with us since the Boston tea party. Yet, it is being challenged and thus far the federal government has made no move to break it up. As long as employers organize and tread on labor with a steel boot, just so long the workers are entitled to organize to combat mistreatment from business. But it does not seem to me to be a right of labor to actually take private property. To that extent I cannot feel very kindly toward those strikers at present asserting such a right through use of the "sit down" strike.

Now, there are reasons why the federal government has not acted. If troops were sent into private factories to drive out the "sit down" strikers, one can readily see what a riot would result. But if the federal government fails to enforce this inherent right, it is not doing its sworn duty to the rest of the people. And it was only a few weeks ago that Mr. Roosevelt again took the oath of office as President, swearing to enforce as well as defend the Constitution.

Then, another phase of the situation is being discussed. The Wagner law says employers must negotiate collectively "with the majority" organization of employees and it decrees further that the labor relations board shall determine which is the majority organization; that it can decide this question on evidence or order an election among employees. None can tell usually whether union or company organization employees are in the majority in some of these strikes, so the labor relations board has kept out of them.

Taking this labor situation as a whole, I believe I am justified in saying, as I said earlier, that it portends a crisis. Preaching of class hatred has been the main occupation of certain elements in the last three or four years and now those elements are reaping what they sowed. The tragedy of it all is that the rest of us have to reap the same reward.

Wisdom Teeth
Such appellations as "wisdom teeth" to indicate the third molars or "eye teeth" to describe the canine teeth are the carryover from the Middle Ages to our own time of the relationship generally accepted between tooth and wisdom, tooth and eye, says Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Sleep Talk May Be Legal
Words spoken in sleep are not evidence of a fact or a condition of the mind, yet, says Collier's Weekly, some courts of the United States have ruled that such testimony is admissible.

Early Hardships

The Kansas pioneers lived hard lives. They had no fountain pens to leak on their fingers. No telephones to ring while they were taking baths. No motor cars to get flat tires or run out of gasoline. No radios to burn out tubes or be overcome by static. No brush salesmen to ring their doorbells. And no newspapers to make them mad. It took real men to stand up under such hardships.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

How to Ease a Cold Quickly

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in ½ glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness almost instantly.

Get Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving Bayer Aspirin. Take 2 Tablets

The modern way to ease a cold is this: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Then repeat, if necessary, according to instructions in the box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat the fever and pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we know, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's—not for "aspirin" alone.

IMPERSONATOR

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

FAT, paunchy, Ed Bradford, owner of the Bradford vaudeville circuit, rolled a cigar between his thick lips and squinted at the young man on the opposite side of the desk.

"You're a female impersonator, eh? So what?"

"So," said the young man, "my name is Johnnie Sherwood. And I want a place on the Bradford circuit. I'll make you money, Mr. Bradford."

The fat man shook his head.

"No go, son. Business is lousy and getting lousier every minute. You gotta have something pretty special to interest me these days."

"I have got something special," said Johnnie.

He swallowed, and seemed to get a grip on himself.

"I'm good, Mr. Bradford. My act kills 'em."

"Then why aren't you signed up?"

The ghost of a smile flickered across Bradford's face. He waved airily, though his demeanor was not unkindly.

"Sorry, son. Better try the movies."

A sort of desperate look came into Johnnie's eyes. He leaned forward.

"Listen, Mr. Bradford, I've got to have a job. I've simply got to. We-I haven't worked for months, and when you know you've got something good—it kind of makes you mad."

Suddenly he seemed to remember where he was and to whom he was talking. But the memory served only to temporarily suppress his enthusiasm.

"Mr. Bradford, I've heard that you're a sporting man and a square shooter. I'd like to make you a proposition."

"What kind of a proposition?"

"Listen," said Johnnie. "I'm an impersonator, and I think I'm pretty good. You've been in the show business for thirty years, and you think you know the game, I mean, you've seen 'em come and you've seen 'em go. Old timers and beginners. There isn't much you don't know about vaudeville. You'd be a hard man to fool. Now suppose I fooled you with my act—"

Bradford broke into a deep-throated laugh.

"Fool me! Listen, son—"

Johnnie grinned.

"Silly, isn't it? Well, look; I'll step outside and climb into my makeup. Then I'll return here. If you don't think I'm good enough for the Bradford circuit you can say so and I'll scam out of here, otherwise I get a contract."

"What do you mean, otherwise?"

Johnnie shrugged and smiled a little.

"Otherwise I'll let you use your own judgment."

Fat Ed Bradford rolled his cigar and his eyes twinkled.

"O. K., kid. I ain't got nothing much to do this afternoon. You put on a show for me and I'll buy you a dinner into the bargain. You look hungry."

"I am hungry," said Johnnie, "but I want a job worse than a dinner."

He stood up.

"Give me five minutes, Mr. Bradford."

Bradford, amused, nodded. Johnnie went out. Five minutes later the fat man heard a knock on his door. In response to his "come in" the door opened and a pretty blond stepped inside. Bradford stared at her. Her hair looked genuine but her make-up was a little too pronounced—lips a bit redder than they should be, shadows under her eyes a little too deep. The fat man's experienced and expert eye traveled over her slim form. He shook his head sadly.

"Sorry," he said, and shrugged.

"Between you and me, kid, I expected something better."

"I beg your pardon," said the blond.

Bradford looked at her closely. The cigar in his mouth stopped rolling.

"I said you were lousy. You don't get the job."

"What job?" said the blond.

She was obviously quite bewildered, and beginning to be a little annoyed. She went on:

"Are you Mr. Bradford? Mr. Ed Bradford?"

Bradford took a step closer. He squinted, relaxed. No, he wasn't slipping. He knew what he was talking about. Thirty years in the business! No young squirt could fool him.

"Take off the wig, kid, and we'll go out and grab some dinner. And cut out this nonsense. There ain't any use to carry it further."

The blond arched her brows. Her lips pressed together in a straight red line. She looked at him angrily.

"Mr. Bradford, will you kindly explain what this is all about. I came here to see you on business, and you've done nothing but act like—a crazy man. You might at least offer me a chair, and then tell me the joke so I can laugh, too."

Bradford began rolling his cigar again, folding his hands behind him. He was beginning to feel a little annoyed himself. This business was going too far.

"Now listen, son, why not be a good sport and take it like a man? You ain't got no kick coming. You made the terms of this proposition yourself, and I accepted 'em. You even admitted that old Ed Bradford couldn't be fooled. I've been in this racket too long. I've seen better'n you and worse'n you, but the way things are today I can't sign you on. Now get that wig off and climb outter those togs and I'll buy you a dinner, and we'll part friends."

For a moment the blond hesitated. She seemed at once angry and amused. After a moment she came over and stood quite close to Mr. Bradford.

"Mr. Bradford," she said, looking up at him, blue eyes wide, "are you quite sure you know to whom you're talking?"

She smiled.

"I've no doubt but what Ed Bradford is the great man he seems to think himself, and it appears that I interrupted some kind of an act that was being tried out in here. However, your secretary told me to walk right in, and I have some important business—"

Ed Bradford made a sound in his throat, followed by an angry gesture. Before the blond knew what he was about he had reached up, grabbed a handful of her perfectly coiffured hair in his fist, and yanked.

Astonishingly, alarmingly the thing that Ed Bradford had expected to happen, didn't. The blond let out a little cry of agony, but her hair stuck.

Ed Bradford's eyes bulged and he gulped. For a moment it seemed that he wasn't going to grasp the significance of the thing he'd done. Then slowly a red wave, beginning at the base of his neck, mounted into his face and up to the roots of his hair. He let go the handful of blond tresses as if suddenly they had become charged with electricity. He mumbled something in his throat and sat down, his face a picture of guilt and incredulity.

The blond turned and crossed to the wall mirror.

Bradford stared at her stupidly as she rearranged her hair.

"Look here," he said, "this is all a mistake. I mistook you for a young fellow who claimed to be a female impersonator. We made a bet, and he went outside to change, and when you came in I thought it was him. I woulda swore it was him, same features, same eyes, same everything. But—but—well, I'm sorry. If there's anything I can do—"

"There's no need to feel sorry," said the blond. "And there's plenty you can do, Mr. Ed Bradford. You said if I fooled you you'd give me a contract."

"Eh?" Bradford thrust forward his jaw. The blond turned and smiled at him. Specks danced before that fat man's eyes. He blinked. The face beneath the golden tresses had suddenly become that of Johnnie Sherwood again. Bradford swore under his breath.

"Listen," he said, "what is this? Who are you? Or what are you? I mean, which are you? Man or woman?"

"Since you don't know," said the blond, "I guess I fooled you, and I guess I win the bet. However, to ease your mind, I'll tell you I'm a woman, male impersonator, and I guess you'll have to admit I'm pretty good at it."

"I guess," said Ed, "I will." And he got to his feet and crossed to his desk. The incredulous, bewildered look was still on his face as he fumbled in a drawer and presently produced a contract form.

Corpses and Right-of-Way
Puzzle for Legal Talent

Much legal talent is being expended in attempting to discover whether a Surrey legend has any foundation in the statutes of that English county. The legend is that a corpse borne from one isolated piece of land to another establishes the right-of-way.

As far as the Swan Tavern in Leatherhead is concerned the right-of-way is said to have been thus established in the Eighteenth century when a corpse was borne through the brewery yard of that famous coaching inn to burial beyond. The recent purchasers of the hotel site want to know if this be legally the fact.

For, according to the Morning Post of London, the Swan, past which Judge Jeffreys sneaked during his flight from London, at the door of which a Princess of Wales was hurled from her coach and inside which Henry Irving rested between productions, is coming down after more than 300 years. And then, where the Swan and the Swan brewery yard lay, at the crossroads in the center of the town, there will rise a block of shops.

"What then," the inhabitants of Leatherhead ask themselves, "will happen to the corpse-created right-of-way?"

Some contend that the right-of-way is definite and irrevocable, others that, when the corpse was carried, one penny was paid as a fee to the landlord of the Swan to prevent the creation of a right-of-way. No one has yet suggested the carrying of another corpse through the brewery yard to settle the matter.

Illinois mines produced 5,733,619 tons of coal in December, 1936, the highest output for that month since 1929, Governor Horner was informed in a report submitted by James McSherry, director of the state department of mines and minerals.

An uptrend in private welfare work during the last year is indicated in the 1936 report released by the United Charities of Chicago. During 1936 the agency spent $998,125, an increase of $23,000 over the amount spent in 1935. About 10,650 families were served.

A. H. Hill of Dundee was elected president of the Illinois State Nurserymen's association at the close of the organization's twenty-first annual convention in the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago. Other officers chosen were: Vice-president, Ernest Kruse of Wheeling; treasurer, Arthur L. Palmgren of Glenview.

Three runaway Evanston boys were plucked from a Florida bound freight train by Dixon police and returned, crestfallen, to their worried parents. The boys are Robert McCaul Jr., fourteen, the son of an Evanston policeman; Wallace Nelson, fifteen, and William Peters, fifteen.

Miss Dunne was well known in Elgin as an artist, wood carver, and taxidermist.

Raymond Tombozzi of Taylorville was released in Springfield after posting $1,000 bond for his appearance should he be wanted for further questioning in the death of Mrs. Mary Smith, twenty-three, found shot to death in Tombozzi's room. A coroner's jury returned an open verdict in the case, but recommended Tombozzi be held to the grand jury for further investigation.

Peter Westerlung, born in Sweden and one of Henry county's oldest residents, died in Orion. He was president of the Orion State bank for many years and treasurer of the Svea Mutual Insurance company. He was ninety-seven years old and had been a trustee and treasurer of St. Paul Lutheran church. In 1859 he joined a gold seeking party, going to Pike's Peak but returned in 1860.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Illinois Agricultural association in Chicago, Jan. 27, 28, 29, promises to get off to a flying start, Paul E. Mathias, secretary, said. From 4,000 to 5,000 Illinois farmers are expected at the convention from the ninety-seven county farm bureaus in the state. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Dr. John L. Davis of New York city will speak Thursday night. The annual address of President Earl C. Smith and the reports of Secretary George E. Metzger, Secretary Paul Mathias and Treasurer Robert A. Cowles will occupy the opening session Thursday morning.

A Will county farmer was drowned when he drove through a safety gate at the 9th street swing bridge in Lockport and plunged with his car into the sanitary district canal. He was John H. Shepherd, thirty-nine years old, who lived in Du Page township four miles northwest of Lockport.

"Mother of Thanksgiving"

OF COURSE, we all know we owe the observance of Thanksgiving to the Pilgrim forefathers. But if it hadn't been for the persistence of a woman editor the chances are that it would still be only a New England festival instead of a nationwide holiday celebrated in all states on the last Thursday in November. Sara Josepha Hale was her name and she was the editor of Godey's Lady's Book, the most popular woman's magazine of the Nineteenth century.

She was born in New Hampshire in 1788, and, like all New Englanders, the celebration of Thanksgiving, even though its observance was not a regular event, was very dear to her. As early as 1827 she began advocating that "Thanksgiving, like the Fourth of July, should be considered a national festival and observed by all our people." But it was not until 1846 that she began her campaign through the columns of Godey's Lady's Book, of which she became editor in 1828.

Early each spring she began writing letters to governors of all states and territories asking their assistance in making the last Thursday in November, which had been Washington's choice for the first Thanksgiving Day, set aside by Presidential proclamation. By 1849 most of these commonwealths were keeping individual festivals but no attempt was made to have the date uniform. So Mrs. Hale started on the Presidents.

She wrote to Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan again and again. But all of them ignored her, for they felt that such "feminine meddling in public affairs" should be frowned upon. However, in 1863, as the result of a letter which she wrote to President Lincoln, he issued the first national Thanksgiving day proclamation since Washington's day. Mrs. Hale had won her battle after 17 years' effort. With the precedent thus established other Presidents, as well as governors of states, have never deviated from the custom which Lincoln thus established.

Being thus the "Mother of Thanksgiving" was not, however, Mrs. Hale's only claim to distinction. She was the author of that famous poem, "Mary Had a Little Lamb"; she was the first to advocate women teachers in public schools; she started the first day nursery; she founded the first society for the advancement of women's wages, and her demands that housekeeping be given the dignity of a profession put the term "domestic science" in our language.

Prisoner of War

IN THE year 1758 there was born to an English family, then living in Ireland, a son who was to bear the name of John Whistler. Before he became of age young John ran away from home and enlisted in the British army. In 1777 he was sent to America with troops who were to serve under General Burgoyne and when "Gentleman Johnny's" expedition ended in disaster at Saratoga, young John Whistler was a prisoner of war.

Before the end of the Revolution he was sent back to England as an exchanged prisoner and soon afterwards he was discharged from the army. Then he fell in love with the daughter of one of his father's friends, eloped with her, came to America a second time and settled down at Hagerstown, Md. But he could not be content with civilian life for long. So in 1791 this soldier who had worn the scarlet uniform of Old England put on the nondescript uniform of a lieutenant adjutant in the levies which made up a part of the army of the new republic.

From that time on he served continuously on the Northwestern frontier under St. Clair, Wayne and the others who were campaigning against the hostile Indians. By 1797 he had won a captaincy and in 1803 he was stationed at Detroit. Then orders were given to build a fort at the foot of Lake Michigan and establish a garrison there with Whistler as commandant. Accordingly he built the post which was named Fort Dearborn and thus he became the "father of Chicago."

For nine years Whistler ruled at Fort Dearborn and then he was ordered back to Detroit. At the outbreak of the War of 1812 he was serving there on the staff of General Hull and when that flustered officer, without attempting resistance, surrendered his post to the British army which swooped down upon him, Whistler again became a prisoner of war.

So his was the unique distinction of having been a British officer who surrendered to a victorious American army and then an American officer who surrendered to a victorious British army. That alone would make him an "uncommon American" even if he hadn't been the "father of Chicago" and the man whose grandson became one of the greatest of all American artists—James Abbott McNeill Whistler.

Going to the Party?

WHERE is the party? At Mrs. Smith's on Walnut street and it looks awfully much as though the principals were caught by the candid camera. Luckily, however, they're perfectly groomed for their parts:

Introducing Janet.

Janet in her jumper (Pattern 1996) is asking Mother which glassware to use. Her plaid blouse in taffeta makes her feel very dressed up. Mother chose this style because the many possibilities for change make it a wardrobe rather than a dress and she knew it would be easy-to-make. Your own little girl may have this same ensemble in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1 3/4 yards of 39 inch material for the jumper and 1 1/2 yards for the blouse.

Mother, the Hostess.

Mother is the perfect hostess, calm and assured, because she knows her all-occasion frock with its sprightly crisp apron (Pattern 1220) is becoming and appropriate. For house wear she made up this model in print. She is wearing here the crepe version and knows that it will be delightful for later on in cool black and white. It comes in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. The dress and apron in size 36 require 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. The apron alone requires 1 1/2 yards.

And the Guest.

The guest just arriving is wearing her trigest Sew-Your-Own. She likes it because the puffed shoulders and swing skirt make her hips look smaller. The collar is young and the sleeves stylish. This frock is especially chic in silk crepe alpaca or one of the lovely new prints. For your own daytime distinction, then, why not make up Pattern 1205? It is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39 inch material. One ball of yarn required for trimming as pictured.
